COUNCIL ON SILESIA TO CONSIDER 4 QUESTIONS

Additional Topics May Include Greece And Albania Also

TALK OF FINANCE

Cost Of Armies And The Belgian Debt To Be Discussed

(French Wireless through Reuters)

Paris, August 2.—While the British press asserts that the forthcoming session of the Supreme Council will last only a few days owing to important matters of British domestic concern, it is remarked in diplomatic circles here that its agenda is well filled. In addition to the four cardinal questions wherein Germany is concerned, there is the question of the Near East, in which Italy, Great Britain and France are interested, and perhaps that of Albania. It is suggested that Mr. Lloyd George may hand over his part in the negotiations to Lord Carson and return to London in order to devote himself to the Irish settlement.

It is generally accepted that Col. Harvey, the American Ambassador to Great Britain, will represent the United States on the Supreme Council on this occasion.

The Financial Conference, which is entrusted with questions relative to reparation, the cost of the armies of occupation, the amount of the Belgian debt to be repaid by Germany, etc., will be represented by M. Doumer (Minister of Finance)—if he has by then regained his health, as is expected—and by M. Loucheur (Minister of Liberated Regions and Reparations).

The Havas Agency announces that the Allied Finance Ministers will meet in Paris, probably on Tuesday next, to consider the question of the German reparations and indemnity.

Slayer Of French Major Is Found To Be German

(French Wireless through Reuters)

Paris, August 2.—The man who murdered the French Major Montalegre at Beuthen in Upper Silesia some weeks ago has just been arrested by a British officer. His name is Josette, and he was born in Upper Silesia of German parentage. It has been ascertained that a reward was promised to the accused, who belonged to an Upper Silesia secret society, for killing a Frenchman in high position. This disposes of two assertions of the German Government, viz., that Major Montalegre was murdered by a Pole or even by a Frenchman, and that no German secret society exists in Upper Silesia.

Council To Protract Sittings On Silesia

London, August 2.—While the authorities in London express the opinion that the discussions of the Supreme Council will be confined to the Upper Silesian question, and that the meeting will be of a very brief nature, Reuters' Paris correspondent shows that the French contemplate a protracted Council with a very wide scope.

The Matin says that, besides Belgium, invitations will probably be sent to Jugoslavia, Poland and Rumania, while, if discussions on the Near Eastern question should develop, Greece will also be heard.

Contrary to Mr. Lloyd George's belief, as expressed in the House of Commons yesterday, this journal says it is doubtful whether the Commission of Experts, which met in Paris last week to examine the lines of settlement of the Upper Silesian question, will finish its labors before the meeting of the Council. Hence the paper states the decisions of the Council regarding Upper Silesia will probably be merely provisional.

The Matin also anticipates that the Council will be bound to take steps to save the famine-stricken population of Russia.

NOW ARE AGREED
(Reuters' Service)
Paris, August 1.—The papers are unanimous in expressing satisfaction at France and Great Britain having now reached complete agreement over the question of Upper Silesia.

AWFUL PICTURE OF URGH UNDER UNGERN'S ARMY

Eyewitness Tells Of Pogrom And Looting By Savage Soldiery

(Data News Agency)

From a trustworthy observer who was in Urgan during the months Unger occupied the city, and who arrived in Shanghai recently, the following statement was obtained concerning the period of occupation:

Urgan was occupied by the Unger forces numbering not more than 450 men. Of these, 150 were Unger desperadoes, and 300 were Mongolians, "chahars," which means murderers or cut-throats. This detachment had only one light mountain gun and six machine guns.

With this force it would seem difficult to take a city garrisoned with 15,000 men. But Unger manipulated his small forces very cleverly. He opened machine gun fire upon several sides of the city, and during the night moved his one field piece to several positions. The Chinese garrison was deceived as to the strength of the attack and gave up the city.

As the first problem to interest the victorious adventurers, the cry arose:

"Where are the Jews?"

POGROM IS BEGUN

Then started a fearful pogrom. The Jewish and Chinese population were looted and terrorized. Only two Jewish families in Urgan escaped, and this was due to the intercession of Americans.

Banks and offices and the homes of wealthy citizens were pillaged, and certain American firms suffered where the managers were Jews. The advent of Unger was hailed by the monarchist element and Unger received from this quarter encouragement and assurances of support.

On the next day attention was turned toward dissenting Russians. The looters killed the clerks of "Centrosyus"—the branch of the Russian Co-operative Societies, the clerks of the Russian Municipal Council, and, among others, a Russian priest, Fr. Permiakov.

It was the irony of fate that some of the local traders of prominence, to gain favor, as they believed, with Unger, took part in the massacre and looting, and later met a deserved punishment. After the expiration of the time allowed for plundering, and after fires that had started in several sections of the city had been extinguished, Unger issued an order, to the surprise of all, to search out individuals of the civil population who had taken part in the nightmare of crime. They were summarily hanged.

SACKS OF LOOT

Permission was given by Unger to his soldiers to loot till they filled their sacks with gold, silver, and what other valuables they found.

On the second day, when a detachment of Russians presented a petition to bring the looting and

Temperature and Humidity Allied Purge Life Of Joy And Even Transpiration

Not Being Aviators Or Pole Hunters Shanghai Folk Sit And Swelter While Crying "Ananias" At The Thermometer

By Bruce Hopper

Yesterday, to celebrate the idea of the season of great heat, the Shanghai weather man leaved the mercury to the century mark, and the atmosphere loaded up with moisture until the humidity stood at 96 percent complete saturation.

Shanghai was sizzled, scorched, and cauterized. The talpan quit work early to find liquid antidotes against the poison of sun madness beneath the fumes at his club. The rich coolie lay prostrate between the shafts of his chariot, and refused to chop-chop for any price. Even the moisture-loving, fireproof salamander hunted deeper holes in the earth to escape the fierce heat of the sun, and the crushing weight of the stifling air.

"The hottest day of years!" declared the oldest weather soothsayer. "Something is wrong, the thermometers are not working, or the weather man has lost his wits."

The dripping truth of the mystery is to be found on the humidity chart for yesterday. The atmosphere carried only four percent less than its maximum load of moisture. When the air is 100 percent saturated evaporation is physically impossible. Yesterday's humidity was not complete saturation, which rarely happens even in cloud bursts, but every person in Shanghai could have testified to the obvious lack of evaporation.

OH, TO EVAPORATE!

If any one suffocated his way down The Bund in a richa, and wondered why he felt so faint, the answer is: just lack of evaporation. To enjoy the blessings of temperate health in a tropical climate one must be able to evaporate freely. If the air loads up to capacity on moisture then he must get into a fan current so that the natural convection of heat from the body may function.

According to local physicians one of the major factors in the development of tropical diseases, intestinal and otherwise objectionable, is the non-evaporation of perspiration. Unless currents of air play about the body the poisons secreted through the pores of the skin are re-absorbed. The result is to increase discomfort, and weaken the body's resistance to the attacks of bacteria.

It has been found that the tropical sun exhilarates the new comer from Europe or America, but physically and mentally. He wants to play tennis in the early afternoon, walk to and from his office, and in general keep up the speed to which he has been accustomed. After a year in the Orient he drops into the pace of the country, takes his seats after dinner when possible, and crushes his vanity as an athlete. He then has a chance to become serviceable.

The great Darwinian doctrine becomes in the Orient the survival of the slowest. He who hurries gets prickly heat. He is making business prospects for the undertaker. The natives of all plume regions in the East have learned to live leisurely. That the white man has not learned the lesson thoroughly is proved by the fact that the average life of a white family stock in the tropics is only three generations.

BOY! PAGE MR. DANTE!

Shanghai yesterday was a blinding glare of streets and buildings. Seen through green glasses the public garden looked like a Claude Lorraine landscape, but the hot breath of steam from the Whangpoo destroyed the illusion. The panting coolies ankle slowly through the rivulets of melting asphalt in many of the streets, the tar oozed from the paving blocks, and the decks of the steamers in the harbor were slipping hot in the blaze. Hellos is still worshipped in many cities, but Shanghai is not one of them.

The most distressed pictures of misery at noon were the Sikh policemen, who direct traffic at the corners, and who have no other fan than the official club. Asked how they weather the grill they say, "No road here, India better, India cold, India never hot."

The Sikhs are not the only ones who shiver for the punkahs, and a lower scale degree on the thermometer. Many pleasant scenes come to mind, such as great icebergs inhibited by polar bears, and the northern pines where one can breathe the frosty air and listen to the chime of distant sleigh bells.

To remember such things elevates the prickly heat. It also permits one to accept the unsolicited daily Turkish bath with more or less philosophy.

In the meantime Sir Ernest Shackleton is launching another drive to the South Pole. Also, Edwin Naulty announces a projected aeroplano flight from Alaska over the North Pole to Spitzbergen, and Dourafour has landed his plane on the summit of Mt. Blanc.

Civic League Asks Publicity In Municipal Salaries Matter

A statement of the attitude of the Shanghai Civic League on the Council's decision to increase the salaries of its lower paid employees, together with an appeal for greater publicity in Municipal matters and a criticism of the present day effectiveness of the Settlement Land Regulations, was made Tuesday evening by Mr. A. J. Hughes following the discussion by League members of the local housing problem.

Mr. Hughes' talk, which could not be included in yesterday's report of the meeting's proceedings owing to pressure of space, was in the nature of a reply to certain criticism of the League which has appeared in the press.

The speaker explained that in the case of the Bund Improvement scheme the committee did its best to ascertain public opinion on the matter, coming to the conclusion that there was a well divided difference of opinion among the few who evidenced an interest and that the attitude of the majority was one of indifference.

"As regards the increase in Municipal salaries," said the chairman, "although the procedure of the Council is open to grave question as being unconstitutional and creating a bad precedent, at the same time as far as the committee were able to judge of public opinion in the matter we believed that the majority of ratepayers would favor the increase on the statement submitted to the public by the Council and with the modifications adopted."

The speaker then read the following letter, sent to the Council by the League committee, setting forth the latter's views in this connection.

"A. Brooke-Smith, Esq., Chairman, Shanghai Municipal Council.
"Dear Sir.—The Council's statement as published in the Municipal Gazette of the 14th inst. in reference to municipal salaries has since been under discussion by the committee of the Shanghai Civic League.
"Undoubtedly much of the opposition to the recommendations of the Salaries Commission at the ratepayers meeting was due to the increase in taxation necessary to meet them. With the removal of this objection and the other modifications adopted by the Council, we believe that the present proposals of the Council will be acceptable to the majority of ratepayers.
"The Council's present proposals affect almost solely those with salaries of Tls. 300 or less, and we are of opinion that no reasonable objections can be urged against the measures proposed for affording immediate relief. It is not, therefore, the intention of the committee, to take on behalf of the League as a body, the steps necessary to call a special meeting of ratepayers to discuss the matter further, but we would ask the Council, in order to remove a great deal of misconception and to meet a popular demand that undoubtedly exists, to give more specific detail as to the value of the allowances, medical attendance, contributions to expenses when on leave of absence, bonuses, contributions to superannuation fund, etc. over and above the nominal salary, calculated on

DR. O'HARA VICTIM OF HEART ATTACK; HEAT IS FACTOR

Popular Physician And Sportsman In Critical Condition At General Hospital

Dr. W. E. O'Hara, prominent local physician and sportsman, is at the General Hospital in extremely critical condition following a heart attack superinduced by the hot weather and his exertions on the cricket field.

Dr. O'Hara was stricken shortly after midnight yesterday morning and was taken immediately to hospital with Dr. A. M. Massie in attendance. Examination showed that the aortic valve was affected and that the collapse had probably been brought on by the heat and the victim's athletic activities.

Late last night it was stated that he was doing as well as might be expected.

Dr. O'Hara has become one of the most popular practitioners and residents of the Shanghai during his two years' residence here while his sterling play has made him a leading figure among local cricketers and news of his illness came with a shock to his wide circle of friends yesterday.

KOO ASKS FOR FUNDS TO GET TO CONFERENCE

President Of China Calls Ex-Minister To Outline Various Questions

(Reuters' Pacific Service)

Peking, August 1.—The Chinese Minister in London, Dr. Wellington Koo, and the Minister at Washington, Mr. Alfred Soe, have telegraphed to the Government requesting it to furnish the necessary funds for the Pacific Conference as soon as possible. They also anticipate that the Government will publish the names of its representatives at the Conference.

Peking, August 1.—The President has summoned Mr. Wang Tsh-shieh, the former Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Chairman of the diplomatic commission attached to the Presidency, to discuss with him the various questions in connection with the Pacific Conference.

Man Who Murdered Two Chinese Hanged; Expresses Sorrow

K. Peter, Singalese, who murdered two Chinese on July 5, paid the penalty for his crime yesterday morning when he was hanged at the British jail at 9 o'clock. The hanging was conducted by the official British executioner from Hongkong in the presence of Mr. C. P. Garstin, British Consul, Dr. E. G. Gauntlett, Mr. J. W. King, Police Magistrate, a Catholic priest and a number of jail officials.

In his final moments with the priest Peter expressed sorrow for the offense that he committed and asked that this be made known. Following the execution the inquest was held at 10 o'clock when Mr. King sat as Coroner. The body was identified by H. F. da Silva, a fellow countryman of the deceased, and by Liu Tse-wing, proprietor of the shop at 284-5 North Szechuen Road where the murders were committed. Doctor Gauntlett (testifying) said that death was caused from fracture and dislocation of the vertebrae of the neck. The Coroner's verdict was as follows:

"That K. Peter, being a male person of the age of 32 years and unemployed, was a prisoner in H. B. M. gaol, Shanghai, under judgment of death for the murder of Chao Hock-ke and the murder of Yang Tseng-chuen and that judgment of death was duly executed on him by his being hanged by the neck until dead, within the walls of the said prison, on August 3, 1921, not more than 24 hours before the holding of this inquest; and that the body on which this inquest is held is the identical body of the said K. Peter adjudged to death as aforesaid."

As customary in the circumstances, the body was buried in the gaol precincts.

Peter killed the two Chinese, who were employees in the North Szechuen Road shop, in a fit of rage after one of them had refused to let him return a cheap bottle of scent that he purchased in the place. After the double shooting Peter surrendered himself to the police. He was convicted and sentenced to death in the British Supreme Court before Judge Skinner Turner.

Please Take Pity On This Poor Overworked Word

By Elsie McCormick

EVERY summer finds some one word or phrase being worked to the limit of its endurance, the perspiration streaming from every syllable. At the end of the season, it drags its emaciated self wearily away, either to find a respectable haven in the dictionary, or to hide in the linguistic scrapheap and wait for the pariahs to come out.

A year or two ago the ever-strained summer phrase was "camouflage." It was applied to the water-proof composition that ladies wore in bathing; to the chaparral that the fascinating little debutante with two divorces recorded in the family Bible always lost as soon as she was out of sight of the hotel; to the conversation of the young man who referred casually to cables from Wall Street, but whose only financial message during the summer was a letter from his tailor; and to the actions of the lady who always kissed her husband in public with the remark that they had never had a cross word, but who forgot to close the veranda door when they retired to their room for the evening.

NOW OUT OF STYLE

This year, "camouflage" has passed on along with shaved eyebrows and the popularity of Blasco Ibanez. But saving its place is a shorter and even more popular phrase, the verb, "to vamp." Though the word is not exactly new, it never before worked as hard as it is laboring this summer. The word "to vamp" is irregular, and so are many of the activities it covers. Though there are several good grammarians on the premises, nobody conjures vamping, at least, not at this summer resort. We hazard a guess, however, that the conjugation would go something like this:

Infinitive: To vamp.
Present: Anything from an iced coffee to a string of pearls.

Past: Usually doubtful. Perfect: See Theda Bara. Future: See "co-responder."

Also "Lohengrin." In any case, look up "Regret." Conditional: "If I had only known better!"

NO, THAT'S NOT IT

We used to think that vamping was against the law unless the lady wore a leopard-skin robe. We are rather glad now to learn that it isn't, because leopard skins would be rather warm in this climate and the moths would probably play havoc with them if they were hung up over night. Besides, no lady could make much progress if her vamping uniform suggested moth-balls instead of sweet lavender.

We used to think also that the only flirtatious activity which deserved to be classed as "vamping" was a mad infatuation suffered by the party of the second part, resulting in a "You have deceived me, now you must pay the price" sort of a general messing up of the furniture. Since then we have learned that it covers everything from a moonlight stroll to a conversation with a middle-aged hotel manager regarding the porousness of the mosquito nets.

Young men in China who are far from Beatrice Fairfax and the railroad information bureau may find the following glosses of advice a bit useful:

WATCH FOR THESE
(1) If you meet a sophisticated "young person who smokes cocktails, drinks cigarettes, and has palpitation of the eyelids, do not seize too hastily for her engagement book. You will probably soon learn that she is seventeen and just out of boarding-school.
(2) If you meet a sweet little person in organdie with a picture hat, who looks shyly up at you as if she didn't know there were such big, strong men in the world, you can rest assured that she is married and has three children.
(3) If a haughty young lady who has not condescended to speak to you suddenly becomes very affable, you will usually learn by consulting the hotel bulletin board that there is a dance on for Wednesday night.
(4) If you meet a young lady in bathing and make an engagement for tea afterwards, always ask her to wear a red rose or something. You'll never find her otherwise.
(5) If one of the matrons asks you to play bridge with her because it is such "good practice to play with men, you can be reasonably sure of buying her new fall hat.
(6) If all the ladies suddenly become very distant, you can usually learn by examining the shipping schedules that a boat has just arrived from Shanghai with a cargo of husbands aboard.
Kipling called his vampire a "rag and a bone and a hank of hair," but if he ever visits a summer resort in China, he will have to revise it to read: "Organdie, avoidpools, and cootie coops."

And the only time we ever heard anybody say, "Sir! How dare you?" was once when a gentleman remarked that he would rather play poker than go on a moonlight automobile ride.

WIDE FRONT COVERED BY FIGHTING IN HUPEH AREA

For Three Days Air Is Resounding To Fire Of Opposed Forces

Junks Full Of Dead And Wounded Land At Wuchang

(Reuters' Pacific Service)

Hankow, August 2.—From foreign sources it is reported that during the week-end, fighting extended on a front of ten miles in the district of Puchi. There was continuous firing from Friday morning to Sunday.

A report issued officially announces that the Tsuchun, General Wang, who has sufficient troops, has ordered a general attack on Hunan in three directions.

From a reliable source it is reported that General Chang Tso-lin telegraphed General Wang that he was confining himself to the protection of the capital, and was unable to leave Fengtien, and was sending troops to Peking only to replace General Tsao K'un's men sent to assist Hupeh. It is also reported that General Hsiao Yao-nan is not removing his troops from the immediate neighborhood of Wu-Han. It is considered that the Hupeh troops are sufficient for the Hunan campaign.

No Decision, Armies Wait Reinforcements

(Reuters' Pacific Service)

Hankow, August 1.—Fighting took place on Saturday between the Hunanese First Division, with some Hupeh native forces, under General Sung Hsia-kang, and the Northern Fifteenth Division, under General Sun Chuen-fen, between Yangtze and Wulpa. There was no definite decision, and each force retired.

Yesterday morning, with the Northerners reinforced, fighting was resumed.

The losses must have been heavy to judge from the number of dead brought down in junks and landed at Weichang.

The soldiers have been applying press-gang methods to the richa coolies at Hankow for military purposes.

General Wu Pei-fu has not arrived here. Hankow is quiet. It is reported that the Tsuchun, General Wang, has been invested with the fullest powers from Peking.

Wang Denies Consuls Word Of Army Moves

(Reuters' Pacific Service)

Peking, August 3.—Replying to a communication from the consular corps at Ichang through the dozen at Hankow, General Wang Chang-yuan says that he is unable to advise them in advance regarding the movement of troops through Ichang but that he will immediately instruct the officer commanding the troops at Ichang to receive the consular officials in future and to listen to their complaints.

Hunan Winning While Wang Moves Belonging

(Chinese Press Wire)

Peking, August 3.—Following minor skirmishes on Friday, Saturday and Sunday at which Hunanese took the offensive and made unimportant gains, a general drive was instituted on Monday by Hunanese at Chaochiao, pushing the Northerners troops to Chalingkan, 20 li north of the starting point. Hunanese is threatened. General Wang Chang-yuan, the Tsuchun, has moved his valuable personal belongings to Hankow and wired his resignation.

Fighting still continues. The troops engaged in the combat on the Hupeh side consist of those under Sun Chuan-fen, Sun Tshpei and Meng Chao-yu about 20,000 strong while the Hunanese forces are under command of Lu Tsh-ping, Sun Yo-keng and Hsia Tsh-yin of equal strength. It is significant that none of General Hsiao Yao-nan's men of the 25th division are involved. They are now stationed at Louchamiao where Wang Chang-yuan paid them an official call on Tuesday.

Wang is now pouring heavy forces into Linghsiang under Lou Hsia-lung, Linghsiang under

Wu Pei-fu Is Likeable Man; Sings Own Songs At Dinner

Says He Must Look Fierce In His Military Togs But Is Willing To Smile When In Civilian Garb And Always Saves Face Of Subordinates

BY JOSEF W. HALL
(Staff Correspondent of The China Press)

Chengchow, Honan, August 1.—It was my privilege to see, in General Wu's headquarters at Honanfu, the first meeting between the Vice Inspector General and Ma Fushiang, Moslem leader of Kansu, and Tatum of Suiyuan, Inner Mongolia. The Mohammedan chief arrived in General Wu's Ford car, which had been kept at the military siding all morning awaiting the arrival of General Ma's special train from Paoting. An evidence of Tatum's unchanged reliance upon Wu Pei-fu in matters of policy or action is his referring of Ma to the Vice Inspector.

As both men are of the direct type there was little time wasted upon ceremony. Wu received Ma with the foreign-imported hand-shake. He was in uniform and commented that Ma came in informal Chinese garb. "Too hot to be formal," said the guest. "I thank you," said the host, and retired and got into Chinese costume himself.

It being nearly noon, an unelaborate dinner followed in short order. General Ma dispensed with his Mohammedan scruples and ate freely of the food cooked in an un consecrated pot. At the main table sat General Ma, General Wu, General Hsiao Yao-nan whose train stood on the track waiting to take him to the command of the expeditionary troops in Wuhan; Mr. Wang Chin-yu, delegate of Tsuchun Wang Chan-yuan who returned with Hsiao; Mr. Pan, the Kansu agent; two of Wu's brigade commanders, General Lu, Wu's Chief of Staff, Mr. Li, his erudite Chief Secretary, and by special kindness, myself. Two other tables were occupied by officers of the Third Division barracks at headquarters.

WU LEADS SINGING
Table talk consisted of some humorous comment upon the vagaries of the Ministry of War. A military band of some seventy pieces—the best I have heard in China, composed largely of student recruits—played foreign airs quite passably and Chinese airs excellently. Then, accompanied by the band, half of whom dropped their instruments and joined with lusty voices in the choruses, General Wu himself sang for us two of his camp songs: one an original composition and one a translation from an old French patriotic ballad—both prepared by his student soldiers. The Moslem chief was much impressed and took copies home to teach his Kansu braves, who are lusty singers.

Wu's several thousand student recruits are now scattered throughout his regiments. They make better soldiers, he states, when well-mixed with the recruited coolies, and also in this way stand better chance for promotion.

At the close of the meal I asked to be allowed to take a snapshot of Generals Ma and Wu together. "Wu" invited General Hsiao into the group. Wu got much interested in my kodak, and asked me to purchase for him twelve such kodaks for the use of his educational department.

Tsuchun Wang's representative and myself were then sent off together to Hsiao's waiting train in a goods carriage, the Vice Inspector, after some private instructions, escorting General Hsiao in his motor car. The Tsuchun's agent covered with an air of suavity his displeasure at my suggestion that it is about time for Wang Chan-yuan to retire.

Arrived at the siding, General Wu asked me to take snapshots of the escorting guard of honor, of which, in the bearing of the soldiers, he told me that he was very proud. His relationship with his officers and men appeared to be most cordial. The troops of the Third Division are trained thoroughly, and the officers at headquarters have a soldierly and capable mien.

TRUSTS HIS MEN
Wu moves among them freely, without the nervousness and apparent mistrust of attempt upon his life which I have noticed in other military chieftains. I held extensive conversations with five or six of his staff. They evidenced considerable interest in and knowledge of affairs of their country and of the world. They were particularly anxious to talk on President Harding's Pacific and Disarmament Conference. They did not agree on the questions discussed; some held with their chief that China must be united by talking rather than fighting, while others believed military conquest by the fittest elements to be the only hope.

WU NOT AFTER PELE

They all showed real loyalty to General Wu—not the fear and favoritism inspired kind which may be found in the camp of Chang Tso-lin, but rather a kind founded upon respect for a leader whose ambitions, as they assured me, are to benefit his nation, not to enrich or empower himself.

"Wu," said one of his men, "is more successful than his rivals because while their motives are mixed his idealism enables him to concentrate his mind upon his problems."

GIVES THEM FACE

On the other hand, I noticed that Wu endears his men to himself by liberally dispensing that thing the Chinese loves even above wealth: face. Perhaps no other general in China, in dispatching a subordinate to the front, would have personally escorted him onto his train. General Hsiao Yao-nan will fight for a leader who treats him like that.

This action of Wu's is far more an index to his character than the rather fierce-looking photographs of him which have appeared. I demonstrated with him in regard to his poses.

"Your features are mild and friendly, not uncompromisingly stern, as the photographs which you have given the press would lead newspaper readers to believe," I said.

"When I am in uniform," he replied, "it is fitting that I should look stern. In common dress I will smile for you."

WOULD INTEREST CHANG

Tatum Ma stayed after the departure of General Hsiao, Tsuchun Wang's agent and myself, for some quiet words with the Vice Inspector General. His private locomotive, a still blowing off steam at Chengchow, waiting for another private train to bring him down from Honanfu. What the two are talking would make interesting reading—particularly, I imagine, to Chang Tso-lin. It is not, however, difficult to surmise. Apparently the High Inspector General of Manchuria and Inner Mongolia does not stand very secure in the latter and newly acquired portion of his kingdom.

BITTER AGAINST LU

Ma Fushiang and the Moslems have heretofore been aloof from the Chihli faction (meaning Wu Pei-fu) because of the latter's support of Lu Heng-tao as Tsuchun of Kansu. The Mohammedans claim that Lu, a Kiangsu man, is responsible for having created misunderstanding between the Moslem and Chinese populations of Kansu, and demand his removal. "If one Mohammedan remains alive in Kansu, Lu Heng-tao shall not hold his seat," said Ma in an interview last June.

This question probably will be settled before General Ma leaves Honanfu. Ma is worth far more to Wu now, prepared as he is to unite with Chang Kwei-ti of Kalgan and Jehol in checking any southern invasion of Fengtienites, than Lu Heng-tao can ever be. It should be said in this connection that General Ma's visit to Honanfu, although fitting in well with the present crisis, goes deeper than the Wuhan exigency, which is regarded as a step rather than a culmination by Chinese politico-militarists.

Tsao Kun, tuchun of Chihli, has refused to accept the full power offered him by Peking in dealing with the Hupeh situation. Tsuchun Wang now offers his post to Hsiao Yao-nan and asks that he be allowed to go to the front himself to conduct the battle. Hsiao Yao-nan is said to have asked Wang for two months' expenses and 3,000 rifles.

The Ministry of Finance has remitted $300,000 to Hankow for Wang's campaign expenses. A military conference held in Mukden and presided over by the Manchurian warlord, Chang Tso-lin, decided to mobilize the 27th and 33rd divisions for the Hupeh Expedition. Chang has definitely abandoned his Mongolian Expedition, which will be undertaken by his brother, Chang Tso-hsiang.

The movement of the two divisions, which will be under the control of Chang Ching-hui, Chang Tso-lin's trusted aide, will depend on the attitude of the Chihli forces. If the latter fail to help Tsuchun Wang effectively, Chang will march his men down.

The proposal of Tsuchun Chih Shih-yuan of Kiangsu to send one division of troops to aid Tsuchun Wang Chan-yuan has met with an upsurge of dissent in this province. Upon request of members of the gentry of the province, Huang Yung-chien, member of the Nanking Assembly, has addressed a serious protest against the move.

The message took Chih to task citing his own words uttered recently at a banquet given to the provincial elders when he stated that he would never allow himself to be involved in the internecine conflict. Mr. Huang pointed out that Kiangsu is being bled white by military expenditures, while the province is infested with brigands. He said that to send troops to Hupeh would be like trying to aid other people while being "confined at the bottom of a well."

Peking, August 1.—General Wu Pei-fu, Vice-Inspector General of Chihli, Shantung and Honan, has telegraphed to the Government a protest against the withdrawal of the Chinese police from the gates of the Legation quarter. He fears that the Anfuities may easily make their escape at any time if these police are withdrawn and suggests that if it be not permissible to station members of the Legation police at the gates of the Legation quarter, these might be replaced by a sufficient force of secret service agents to prevent the escape of the Anfuities.

PEEVISH GIRLS

It isn't their fault.

Astonishing, how many girls "can't get on with Mother!" They are pale, fretful and cross, often bed with a sick headache, a sad contrast to the bright children they were a year or two ago. Those pale lips, backaches, breathlessness and languor tell the whole story to an observant eye. She is growing into womanhood and Nature is asking more of her than she is fitted to bear. Her studies or the light work that she can do wear her out. She has pains and aches that no one pities, because she has grown melancholy and silent. She has queer fancies; will eat sweets when she refuses food, or takes a whim for some unnatural thing like raw rice or even, sometimes, chalk.

Naturally, her temper would be bound to suffer. It isn't your girl's fault that she is peevish. She has become bloodless. Give her a little of the rich, red blood that Dr. Williams' pink pills are famous for making, and you will soon see the difference. It will show first in her better appetite and better temper; then her color will improve and her eyes regain the lustre of health. Bright spirits will take the place of her melancholy and languor.

Thousands of girls the world over have been built up in this way by Dr. Williams' pink pills. They are equally good for mothers, being of especial usefulness to women at all stages of life. Get a supply from any dealer, or direct from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai, price $1.50 per bottle, $8 for 6 bottles, post paid. The helpful booklet, "Plain Talks to Women" will be sent to you free in response to a postcard request.

SCHEDULE IS ANNOUNCED FOR NINTH CAVALRY SERIES TO START HERE ON TUESDAY

Six-Game Program Arranged; Tickets May Be Secured From Club Secretary; Dairen Team Expected This Month

The Ninth Cavalry team will arrive in Shanghai from Tientsin on August 8 and will play according to the following schedule:

Tuesday, August 9, at 4:30 p.m.
Wednesday, August 10, at 4:30 p.m.
Thursday, August 11, at 4:30 p.m.
Friday, August 12, at 4:30 p.m.
Saturday, August 13, at 4 p.m.
Sunday, August 14, at 4 p.m.

Tickets will be on sale to non-members at $5 for the series or $2 for each game. They can be obtained from the club secretary, Mr. W. P. Wilson at No. 118 Nanking Road (Pacific Mail S.S. Co.'s office) or at the grounds daily while the games are in progress. Tickets for individual games will also be on sale at the grounds.

Membership tickets will admit members and all members will be required to show their tickets in order to gain admittance; there will be no exceptions to this rule, therefore all members should have their tickets in their possession.

A separate gate will be provided for members. The club expects to bring the strong Dairen team to Shanghai for a series of five or six games during the latter part of this month, the arrangements to this end being practically completed.

MUST SELL 500 TICKETS
The above announcement put out yesterday by the management and committee of the Shanghai Baseball Club tells the whole information required concerning the handling of the Shanghai Ninth Cavalry baseball series.

It might be added for the information of the fans that the idea of charging non-members for the series was made necessary by the great expense attached to bringing to Shanghai the contenders for the honors as the strongest and fastest American baseball team in the Far East.

The management figures that it will be necessary to sell 500 series tickets for the Shanghai Cavalry games, to pay all of the expense. Accommodations have been arranged for approximately that number of extra grandstand seats for the games, so with so many in port and consequently no demand for space by sailors, the extra crowd should be cared for comfortably. The park for these games will have seating capacity for more than 1,600 fans.

The Cavalrymen have lived up to their reputation for strength in the Tientsin Baseball Tournament which has just finished. In the seven games in which the colored team engaged there they won five and lost two. Only the 16th Infantry nine scored wins over the Manila men, and they turned that trick twice, winning their individual series by two out of three games. The Cavalry boys hooked up with the Osaka Diamond nine but once, and then shut them out for a score of 4-0.

THE WEEK-END GAMES
The week-end program as announced yesterday will stand. The team off the gunboat Wilmington will meet Shanghai Saturday at 4 o'clock and the Socony team, which represents the Standard Oil Club, in the new Hong League will oppose the big club Sunday at the same time.

Saturday's game versus the Wilmington will perhaps be the last time that the little gunboats will be seen in action in this port this summer. It is understood that the warship is under orders to sail some time between Sunday and Tuesday.

Shanghai however, with the Cavalry team in town for six days play, and the Hong Leaguers working up in practice will be provided with baseball regularly until the next warship puts in, or until the next interport game is arranged for.

Hockey Star Makes Good In Baseball

When Jim Riley, home-run king of the Pacific International League and former Seattle hockey star, was sold to the St. Louis Americans for $5,000 he set a record for rapid rise in baseball. Within three months he jumped from the hockey field to the big league.

After thrilling thousands of hockey fans during the last few years with his sensational playing, he broke into baseball this year for the first time and developed almost immediately into a star.

SAYS "BUGS" Baer:

NEW FIGHT RATES BOOST TO GAME

Queensbury Frolics Will Pick Up Gate Weight At Lower Prices

BY "BUGS" BAER
Limiting prizefight tops to fifteen washers a throw is a couple of lumps in the right direction. When you figure the A. E. F. signing up for thirty a month and cakes, how can you dope two battlers fighting more than fifty cents worth an evening.

A luxuriously taxed ringside seat doesn't mean that the fight is going to be palatial in its thumping and gorgeous with cauliflower cars. The amateurs are proving that the ticket tariff has nothing to do with the Queensbury tableaux.

The right way to figure out seat assessments is after the fight, not before it. Let the speculators vote to see how much the battle was worth. Carpentier and Levinisky put up a high cost scuffle in Jersey that any ringside bug would have paid a ransom on for the privilege of shooting out the nearest exit.

You can't blame the promoters. When the hens are laying is no time to put the dampers on the golden goose. The trouble lies with the boxers who step into the ring undertrained and overmanaged. No boxer would think of battling now in a ring that hasn't got Persian canvas, velvet portieres and a lustrous top. They want to use gold dust for rosin and have valets instead of seconds.

In the old days, John L. and his playmates used to wheel out into a sheep pasture and slug each other for a purse made by the Durham Tobacco Company and loaded with two ounces of fine cut. They thought knuckles were bonbons in those days and a black eye was the same thing as saying it with flowers. They used to train off whatever was in the bottle.

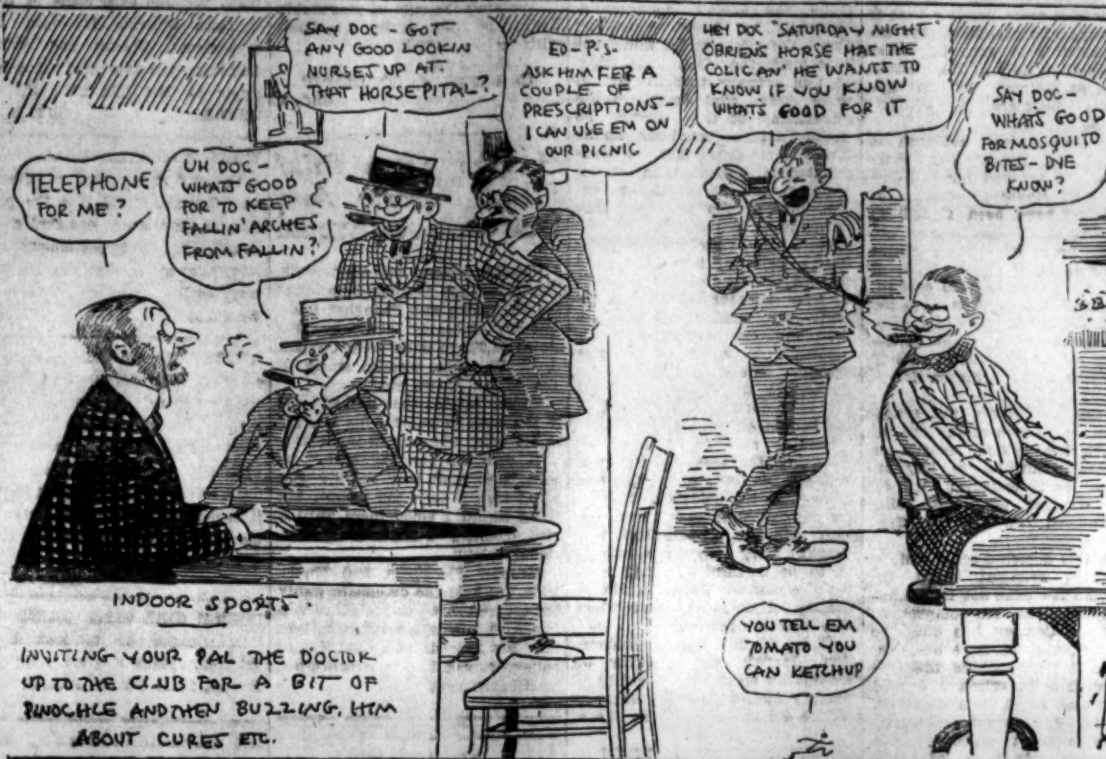

When two men fought, they pulled and tugged until one of 'em pointed to Geneva, Switzerland, on the map. Biting, kicking, scratching were all on the menu. Later, this was ruled off as being too effeminate. If a fighter won his carfare home, he was accused of profiteering.

Now, a fighter wouldn't even pull on his full dress gloves for less than ten thousand certificates. Even the losers get paid like winners. When a referee is counting now, he's counting thousands. It's music to the bird who is picking butterflies off the canvas. Every battler has his own bathrobe and his tights are made of silk.

Sharkey, Fitz, Ruhlman and the bunch never got fifty thousand documents for a battle. Most of Sharkey's receipts were cracked ribs. Can you imagine putting the Sailor into a 1921 ring and telling him that he was going to get fifty grand for the privilege of knocking some bird half-witted?

Times sure have changed since Grandpapa used to hang the barkeep up for a snifter.

Dempsey Sees In Pictures How He Nearly Lost Title

New York, July 3.—Jack Dempsey "fought" Georges Carpentier all over again today. The world's champion saw the "movie" of his terrific struggle against brave Georges. He had to travel to Newark to do it, too. The pictures are marvellous of action.

Then he lived it all over again. Dempsey laughed aloud when, in the first round, the action of the picture was slowed down; often times slower than the usual speed. It gave the champion and his tormentor the appearance of softly flying through space and just as softly powder-puffing each other with blows bared to their very skeletons.

Naturally, Dempsey was all agog about that never-to-be forgotten second round. "Now, you just wait and see if this isn't true," whispered Dempsey to a reporter. "I tell you he didn't knock me as hard as you fellows think in that round. I was going to sidestep to beat him to a right when I got that crack. Honest, fellows, it just knocked me out the line. I wasn't groggy. Why, when I went to my corner Doc Kearns said, 'Hey, Charley, he hit you one on the pick then, didn't he? Well, I burned up."

"You know he calls me Charley for a kid. 'What?' I yelled at Jack, and I got good and mad when I saw him fiddling with the smelling salts. Gee, I wasn't groggy or anything like that. You remember how I pumped into his body when I got my balance again?"

"Now, here she comes. Here watch!"

And here Dempsey tried to show the punch, explain it and fight it, all at one time. But Dempsey's spoken words were drowned by the applause that greeted the Frenchman's shadowy approach to the kingdom of Queensberry realm. The picture showed Dempsey off "balance" and seems to show more vividly than naked eyes did on Saturday how close he came to pugilistic doom, so far as the title is concerned.

The Frenchman attacks with both hands flying so fast that even the camera can't reproduce the fury of his action. You do see, however, the champion reeling and almost going over. And you do get a fair idea of what sort of hell would have broken loose if that golden-haired idol of France had downed the steel-jawed champion.

You see the saucer full of starched men and women rise like a black wave and cheer the supposed end of the champion. And Dempsey, in the darkness, sees the demonstration over his

CARPENTIER AND GIBBONS TO MEET EARLY THIS FALL

Tex Rickard Announces Fight As Likely For Madison Square Garden

(Reuter's Service)
New York, August 2.—Mr. Tex Rickard announces that the Carpentier-Gibbons fight will probably be held at Madison Square Garden late in October or early in November.

The Carpentier-Gibbons fight, announced in the above telegram was talked of by American fight promoters and fans, almost before the French champion had recovered from the knockout administered by Dempsey at Jersey City, July 2. It has been agitated ever since.

An attempt was made shortly after the Dempsey fight to book the Gibbons-Carpentier Contest for Labor day using the Jersey City arena. But Carpentier's doctors forbade such an early fight. Six weeks of rest were insisted upon by the medical men, and then at least six weeks of training were demanded by Manager Descamps, leaving the earliest date at which Georges might enter the ring again at Oct. 2.

plight at the arena and hears the demonstration in this little theater over the same thing.

One man, forgetting himself, yelled aloud, "Go it, Georges! Go it, knock him dead!" And in the gloom of the back seats Dempsey hunched his shoulders and seemed to be blocking the phantom Frenchman.

"Aw, let 'em cheer. I tell you, I was only off balance. When I'm on the floor from a punch it's time to talk about me being hurt," said Dempsey, almost under his breath.

But there can be no mistake about Dempsey's plight. He was rocked and rocked for fair. Perhaps he did not realize how bad he was hit.

Novel Explanation Of Harvard's Defeat

Fate plays many funny tricks in athletics. Eddie Farrell of Harvard taught Tom Nighan of Holy Cross to put the shot, while attending prep school. Tom turned around in the Intercollegiate games at Boston, beating Eddie out of third place. If Eddie had won third Harvard would be the champion and not California.

Jim Mitchell, Famous Weight Man, Is Dead

ICE BREAKER TO LEAD FORAY OF BRITISH TRADERS

2,000 Miles Of Siberian Rivers To Be Traversed Before Winter Sets In

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 2.—Pursued by the most modern ice-breaker, a trade expedition of five ships is leaving immediately for Siberia, carrying 11,000 tons of commodities, principally machinery, tools and railway material. Two of the vessels left Liverpool yesterday, and will be joined by two British ships from Hamburg and a Norwegian vessel from Gothenburg.

The expedition will proceed by the Kara Sea to the mouths of the Obi and Yenesei Rivers, whence it hopes to penetrate 2,000 miles of Asiatic Russia, bringing back in October 15,000 tons of Siberian products. If this expedition should be successful, it will be the forerunner of a regular trading service.

Pre-War Mail Route Is Not Yet Secure

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 2.—Replying to the questions in the House of Commons today as to whether there were any prospects of resuming the pre-war mail routes to the Far East, Mr. P. G. Kellaway, Postmaster-General, said that there were no immediate prospects of again utilizing the Siberian route, as it did not yet offer the necessary conditions of speed and security.

Text Of Judgment In Gaynor Case

This is a prosecution for an assault alleged to have been committed on a Chinese chauffeur on July 11 last about 3 a.m. The chauffeur is the only witness who testified to the assault but several Chinese witnesses employed at the Del Monte Club and two Americans testified to having seen the accused there during the night preceding and two Chinese, Sung Sze-pao and Wang Chu-hei tell of seeing the accused go back to the Del Monte about three o'clock driving a car. A chit which defendant admits having signed but states that it was two nights previously is offered in evidence and likewise an offer to compromise by paying the motor car company, the physician's bills "and all other expenses incurred in this case."

Defendant denies that he was in the car with the chauffeur or at the Del Monte on the night in question though he admits that he was there two nights previously. He says that he was on duty at the Custom House from 1:10 a.m. until morning and in this he is corroborated to a certain extent by three foreign witnesses one of whom, R. B. Martin, states that he was relieved by defendant "about five or ten minutes past one"; another, Stellingwerf, who says that he saw him at 3:45 and a third, J. J. Martin, who states that he saw defendant at 8:10 and that his hours were from one to eight.

A letter from the Commissioner of Customs was also mentioned in the testimony to the effect that defendant "reported at one and signed off at eight." Another foreign witness, Hansen, testified that he was at the Del Monte on the morning of July 11 from midnight until 4 a.m. and looked around for the defendant but failed to find him.

It will be seen that there is an almost irreconcilable contradiction between these two groups of witnesses. It was possible of course for the defendant to have been at the Del Monte before one o'clock on the evening in question and still to have been on duty as he claims at the Custom House from 1:10 a.m. on. But it was not possible for him to have been on duty and at the place of the assault at the hour fixed by any of the witnesses. Nor does it seem possible that if as charged he committed the assault about 3:00 a.m. he could have been on duty at the Custom House, as claimed by an apparently disinterested witness, at 2:45.

The documentary evidence is invoked as turning the scale against the accused but the chit bearing his signature might as he claims have been signed on the occasion of his visit two nights previously. It contains nothing in itself to connect it with the night of the assault. The other document is objected to on the ground that an offer of compromise is inadmissible. This is a well established rule in civil cases and the reason for it is that "The law favors the settlement of controversies out of court, for which reason a person is entitled to 'buy his peace' or to endeavor to do so, without danger of being prejudiced in case his effort should fail."

But this doctrine could not be applied to criminal cases because the law does not favor, nor usually sanction, the compromise of crime. Counsel has cited no authority, and we have been unable to find any, where the rule was applied in criminal cases. The document is, therefore, inadmissible but is not necessarily conclusive for it expressly disclaims any admission of guilt and recites that it is given "merely to save myself from losing my position."

According to all the testimony on this point others besides the accused were involved in the affair. The chauffeur says that there were four in the car and three who assaulted him. One of the Government's foreign witnesses testifies that on the morning after the assault another than the accused came to the

Del Monte and told the witness, "I am the man that hit him in the eye" and the witness adds, "I guess he was the man all right."

It seems quite possible that the accused was in some way connected with this party or with those mentioned by the chauffeur and that it was to conceal this connection that he made the offer of compromise. Evidently he knew something about the affair or he would not have made the offer. But unless he was actually present or in some way contributed to the commission of the offense he would not be criminally liable.

There is no claim that he contributed otherwise than as a principal and no testimony except that of the chauffeur that he actually participated in the assault. In view of Stellingwerf's testimony that he saw the accused at the Custom House at a time so near that of the assault we cannot say that the chauffeur is sufficiently corroborated to establish a case against defendant beyond a reasonable doubt. If there is any such doubt he is entitled to the benefit of it. And in appearance and in manner of testifying the accused did not impress us as one who was abdicating his evidence. Nor do we suggest that such was the case with the prosecution's witnesses. They may have intended to be truthful and may have been mistaken either in identification or as to the time when they saw the accused.

There is one other consideration. If defendant is guilty of assault he must also be guilty of perjury and, as already suggested, he did not seem to us like a perjurer and upon the evidence before us we do not feel that we could convict him of that offense. While there are some suspicious circumstances against him we do not feel that they are sufficient to overcome the presumption of innocence and the testimony in his favor.

Applying the rule of reasonable doubt he is hereby acquitted with costs de officio.

By the Court,
CHARLES S. LOBINGIER,
Judge.

Hongkong Bank Thief Pleads Poverty And Sick Wife As Excuse

Pleading poverty and a sick wife, Jan Novak, the Austrian arrested at the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank Tuesday morning after he had stolen $1,000 in notes from Captain C. E. Williams, pleaded guilty in the Mixed Court yesterday.

Novak testified that he had gone to the bank to transfer his last $20 to his wife, who was ill in Peking. "I saw the handbag open," he said, "and being poor and my wife being sick I took the money, but being afraid I stood there until I was arrested. I am not a professional thief."

Assessor Blackburn and Magistrate Yui held the defendant guilty but ordered sentence postponed two weeks to enable the police to look into his record. The authorities believe Novak has been concerned in Bolshevik activities.

Hongkong Share Market

Messrs. Moxon and Taylor of Hongkong write as follows in their weekly share report dated Hongkong, July 29:
There has been a fair amount of business during the week under review with a hardening tendency in the majority of stocks.
Banks and Unions have been in more demand and a good many shares have been placed at quotations.
The Shanghai market for Cottons has been on the quiet side, owing no doubt, to some extent, to the settlement yesterday, but from advices in this morning the market seems to have steadied up again.
The following are the chief alterations since last week:
Hongkong Banks:—Old shares

have buyers at $700 and rather more would probably be paid. New shares, $35 paid, have come to business at $402 1/2. Cantons:—Are wanted at $405. Unions:—Have come to business at $225 and more shares could probably be placed at this figure. Hongkong Fires:—Are firm at $320. Hongkong Docks:—After dropping to $195 close firm with buyers at $197 1/2. Deferred Indos:—Are steady at $287 1/2 London Register and $285 Hongkong Register. China Sugars:—After dropping to $134, at which price a good many shares changed hands, have firmed up and close with buyers at $188, with no shares offering. Cements:—Have come to business at $17. Hongkong Lands:—Are wanted at $197 1/2. Shanghai Docks:—Have declined to Tia. 125 cash and Tia. 128 September ex dividend and close steady at these rates. Hongkong Electric:—Have been the medium of considerable business at $23 1/2, and close with buyers at $23 1/2. Humphreys:—Are quiet at $10 1/2. Shell Transports:—Are nominal at 105/-.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

It has been brought to our notice that certain dealers in Mineral Waters, taking advantage of the present heat wave, and consequent enormous demand for Aerated Waters, are extracting an increased price for our products, amounting in some cases to as much as 100%. This is profiteering of the worst description and our customers should refuse to put up with it. We should feel greatly obliged if they would notify us of any such cases, so that we may be able to deal with the parties concerned.

It is needless to add that we ourselves have not increased our prices one cent.

Ending War But Not Making Peace

(New York Times)

PRESIDENT Harding was well advised not to allow a splurge to be made over the signing of the joint resolution of Congress declaring at an end the state of war with Germany. There had been talk of getting up a tremendous hullabaloo over the affair. The President was to offer peace as a splendid Fourth of July present to the nation. There was to be jubilant amid tears of thankfulness. But with great good sense Mr. Harding put his veto on all this nonsense. He doubtless knew that any kind of celebration which could have been worked up would have looked too transparently stinky and artificial. Most Americans would have resented it as an attempt to bamboozle them. As a matter of fact, they are not at all excited about what they clearly perceive to be only a legal recognition of an admitted fact—that is, the cessation of hostilities. Any endeavor to represent this as a thrilling, patriotic achievement they would have regarded as the lowest form of buncombe.

The people understand perfectly that the real work of making peace with Germany is yet to be done. No one is more keenly aware of this than the Washington Administration. It keeps on giving assurances from time to time that it has a peace program. The State Department is understood to be working at it with all the industry and intelligence that the country associates with its head, Secretary Hughes. The details are as yet withheld, but the main general principle is clearly revealed. It is that of hearty co-operation with the Allies. Already it is explained that nothing will be done distasteful or embarrassing to them in pursuance of the peace resolution. If they want our troops to stay for a time on the Rhine bridgehead, the American force will not be withdrawn. Secretary Weeks states that he has taken no steps to bring our soldiers home. Not till France and England are content to see them go will they be recalled.

Apart from that minor question, there must come now direct negotiation with Germany for a treaty of commerce and amity made necessary by the ending of war. Above that rise the larger and much more vital matter of an instrument of peace which will determine not only our relations with Germany, but our place and duty in the new world that has come since the armistice. That instrument lies ready to our hand in the shape of the Versailles Treaty. To "engage" under it has been declared by the President to be the wiser course. And though it gives Senator Lodge and the other plotters against the Treaty cold shivers to hear that it may be resubmitted in amended form, the best information at Washington is that this is what will be done. Then there would be another state of war. The irreconcilables in the Senate would fly to arms and oratory. But they would soon find their courage ebbing out of them in the face of the immense popular disapproval which would be certain to come down heavily upon further perverse opposition to making a peace in the only way by which it could be rendered satisfactory and lasting.

ENRICO CARUSO

"The death has occurred at the age of 48 years of the celebrated tenor, Cav. Enrico Caruso."

The Singer is dead! Sighing zephyrs wait him on his way, And birds in a chanted melody sweet Sing his requiem. Earthly harmony weeps. But the Master Singer must take his seat In the Celestial Choir.

For twenty years and more the name of Caruso has been most widely known among great singers. Only a few weeks ago the musical sphere was rejoicing in the recovery of the wonderful tenor from a trying operation following upon an attack of pneumonia. On his departure from America we read that multitudes went to bid him God-speed and a quick return. One of his admirers shouted to him and asked him if his voice was a right again, and the reply was a cadenza from the tenor that gave delighted satisfaction. He arrived in his native land there to find how many times as "Rhadames he had heard 'Aida' sing: O native land, no more to thee shall I return! O skies of tender blue, O soft airs blowing, Where calm and peaceful my dawn of life passed o'er, O hills of verdure, O perfumed waters flowing, O home beloved, I ne'er shall see thee more! That he did see his sunny native land again must have added peace to his last moments.

From the same wonderful opera Caruso often sang in company with "Aida" words very appropriate to these days when all music lovers mourn the loss of a master: Farewell, O earth, Farewell, thou dark vale of sorrow, Brief dream of joy, Condemned to end in woe! See, brightly opens for us, Brightly opens now the sky, and endless sorrow, There, an unsundered shall eternal glow! Too seldom do we hear the wonderful words of the great operas in our own language. I translate to detract, and yet read the following translation of "Don Jose's" beautiful song in which Caruso often portrayed the struggle between love and duty of the unfortunate lover, and judge whether English is not a worthy vehicle for the grandest thoughts.

This flower thou gave to me degraded 'Mid prison walls, I've kept 'tho' faded; Tho' withered quite, the tender bloom Doth yet retain its sweet perfume. Night and day in darkness abiding, I the truth, Carmen, am confiding; Its loved odour 'd I enha'e, And wildly called thee without avail. My love itself I cursed and hated. Then alone myself I detested. And naught else this heart interested, Naught else it felt but one desire, One sole desire did I retain. Carmen, beloved, to see thee once again!

Another fine example of the wealth of words that clothe great thoughts, is where Faust—a favor his portrayal of Caruso—rhapsodizes the modest dwelling of Marguerite. All hail, thou dwelling pure and lowly! Home of an angel fair and holy, What wealth is here, what wealth outbidding gold. Of peace and love, and innocence untold! Bounteous nature! 'Twas here by day thy love was taught her, Here thou did'st with care overshadow thy daughter, In her dream of the night! Here, waving tree and flower Made her an Eden-bower of beauty and delight.

JAPAN AND KOREA

The Case of Korea. By Henry Chung, Korean Commissioner to America and Europe. New York: Fleming H. Revell Company. $3 (gold).

China, Japan and Korea. By J. O. P. Bland. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. $5 (gold).

(Reviewed in New York Times)

"The greatest of national tragedies today" is what Mr. Chung calls the case of his native land, Korea. He recounts how the Japanese have occupied it without a semblance of right, how they are enforcing their rule with brutal and high-handed methods, not stopping short even at massacre. In spite of all Japan's efforts, there is a Korean party advocating Korean independence and a duly elected President of Korea, and men like Mr. Chung are devoting themselves to the task of bringing these things before the world and demanding for their native land the recognition and support which, they think, is Korea's due according to all the laws of justice and international right.

Japan bases her arguments for the occupation of Korea on three things: self-defense, necessity for colonization and a benevolent desire to assist Korea. One of these, declares the Korean writer, stands the test of close investigation and international justice. He writes:

An independent Korea, having become a powerful strategic stronghold for a hostile power, would be a dangerous factor in the East. Japan, argues the Japanese statesman, therefore Japan must hold Korea for self-defense. But who would take Korea in essence Japan releases her? The danger of Russian aggression or Chinese imperialism is out of the question. The only nation that has a direct interest in that part of the Orient, outside of Russia and China, is the United States. Would it be possible for the United States to take possession of Korea by force of arms, as soon as Japan releases her, for the purpose of imperial aggrandizement? That question can be left to the judgment of the reader.

The pretext that Japan must have Korea for colonization is equally flimsy. Korea is already densely populated, and the Korean farmer cultivates the soil intensively. Furthermore, the industry and capital now applied by Japan to foreign aggression were used instead for internal development, room for surplus population could be found within Japan proper (Kokkaido (northern Japan) and a southern half of Saghalien Island, though no further north than the States of Oregon and Washington, are sparsely settled. The third claim, that Japan holds Korea for the humanitarian purpose of aiding the Koreans along the path of modern civilization, is a nauseating hypocrisy. Ever since Japan entered into Korea she has been trafficking upon the Koreans' Turkish cruelty with German efficiency and Japanese cunning. Yet she claims that she loves the Koreans as her own people.

At the very moment when the Japanese statesmen are making public statements that they love the Koreans as their brethren, flag are being wiped out, innocent men and women are being beaten to death behind prison bars. The promises of reform almost before they have left the mouth of official Tokio are being washed away in blood. The Japanese have been in Korea since 1905, just after the loss of the Japanese-Russian war. Ten years ago they formally annexed the country to Japan. Previous to the war Japan and Korea had had plenty of dealings, productive of intense enmity; the murder of the Korean Queen in 1895, commonly credited to Japanese assassins said to be acting under instructions from Japan's representatives in Korea. Japan first sent troops to Korea, at the time of her war against Russia, under a definite guarantee that she would respect the independence and territorial integrity of Korea. Mr. Chung does not mince his words regarding her breach of faith.

If there ever were a place on earth that could be called hell it is the Japanese prison in Korea, he writes, following up this statement with a long catalogue of Japanese excesses in his native land. Floggings, he says, are the order of the day, and many forms of ingenious and barbarous torture are resorted to by Japanese jailers in their handling of the prisoners entrusted to them. Since the Korean demonstration of 1919 in favor of independence the Japanese soldiery and police in Korea, according to Mr. Chung, have run amuck. Patriotic gatherings have been dispersed with ruthless brutality, women as well as men having been made to suffer at the hands of rough soldiers and policemen. Worse than this, there have been cases of outright massacre of Koreans, according to Mr. Chung, who backs up his statements with the testimony of others, among them American missionaries and newspaper correspondents. He quotes a Canadian missionary to the effect that, at one place, fifty-four unarmed Koreans were killed by the Japanese and piled in a heap to be buried next morning. The persecution of Koreans extended, it is asserted, beyond the boundaries of Korea to parts of Manchuria where Koreans had taken refuge. A letter quoted by Mr. Chung tells of the burning of fifteen villages in Chinese territory and the shooting of Koreans as they tried to escape from them.

Japanese militarism, says Mr. Chung, is Prussian to the core, and even worse than its European prototype. He writes: The Japanese military system is modeled on the German system, and when there is added to it the Oriental fine art of cruelty, there is a repellent combination which leads many who know the system as it operates in Korea, to speak of it as surpassing the Huns and the Turks in inventive barbarity and fiendish ferocity.

He chronicles a number of further instances of the burning of villages and massacre of their inhabitants and presents photographs of the ruins left by the Japanese in their wake. As for Japanese explanations and denials, he brands them as false.

Nothing but complete independence will satisfy the Koreans, he declares; the movement for independence is strong and has the whole-souled backing of the Koreans, who will not rest until the Japanese who occupy their native soil are forced back to the islands whence they came. There is nothing in all the assertions by Japanese about reforms introduced by them in Korea, insists Mr. Chung; the Japanese are in Korea purely and simply for aggressive purposes, as part of their carefully worked-out policy of aggrandizement at the expense of the nations on the Asiatic mainland lying close to Japan. Mr. Chung constantly makes it clear that the Koreans are in deadly earnest in their hostility to Japanese control. Of their attitude he writes:

They evidently intend to continue the revolution until their country is completely free from Japanese domination. They are roughly awakened, under the cruel blows of their alien masters, to a sense of national consciousness and racial solidarity. This yearning for political freedom is coupled with the sudden setting off of all the accumulated hate, cruelty, tyranny and injustice of Japanese domination that have been practiced during the ten years since the annexation. ***

So long as there is a Korean left, there will be a cry for independence. Will Japan continue to use bayonets to crush the movement? Will this circle of sullen and passive resistance on the part of an unarmed and defenseless people, on the one hand, and the organized military oppression, on the other, be carried to the point of racial extinction of the Korean people? Can Japan succeed in annihilating the Korean race—20,000,000 people?

Mr. Chung's pages are freely sprinkled with statements from Americans who have visited Korea and studied the Korean question, which corroborate his own assertions. His book is one that should be read carefully by any one wishing to arrive at a correct understanding of the case of Korea against Japan.

Mr. Bland has also something to say on the Korean question, though most of his book is taken up with Chinese and Japanese matters. He speaks on the Far East from a wealth of personal knowledge, having been for thirty years secretary to Sir Robert Hart, the famous English head of the Chinese customs service, and also correspondent in China for The London Times. After an absence from the Orient of ten years he returned here a short time ago, so he has had ample opportunity of seeing the changes wrought by the war in China, Japan and Korea.

It was Woodrow Wilson and his principle of self-determination, says Mr. Bland, which aroused the Koreans to make a fight for independence against the Japanese, who had annexed Korea to Japan. Unlike Mr. Chung, Mr. Bland is no out-and-out partisan of Korean freedom. His observations during a recent visit to the Hermit Kingdom inclined him to the belief that the general condition of the Korean peasantry and their standard of living were appreciably higher at present than, ever before or than they ever could have been had the land remained under Korean instead of Japanese administration. He adds:

And if this be admitted, the practical question next presents itself: Is it not desirable that this material and educational progress should continue even under alien rulers, until such time as the Koreans are either fit for self-government, or in a position to claim complete social and economic equality with the Japanese as fellow-subjects? Would not the immediate application of the principle of self-determination (if it were possible) merely throw the country back into the chaotic helplessness of the old Hermit Kingdom? Does not the example of present-day China afford sufficient proof of the folly of endeavoring to apply republican principles to a people which is by nature and traditions incapable of organizing any form of representative government? The real Korean question lies here: to devise an alternative to Japanese rule, which shall give the country (and its neighbors) a reasonable prospect of peace and progress.

Mr. Bland is no admirer of the Chinese Republic. He thinks the transition from autocratic forms of Government was altogether too violent for China, accustomed as she was to centuries of monarchy. Democracy in China, as he sees it, is by no means what it should be; bribery and general corruption are rampant, and there is constant civil war; the zealous members of the Young China party have by no means succeeded in working out from their Utopian theories a practical form of republican administration.

America, he believes, must play a leading part in any effective campaign of reconstruction in China. On this subject he writes:

Any suggestions for the re-organization of China's finances and the reconstruction of the Central Government upon a new basis of effective authority must proceed on the assumption that the commercial powers chiefly concerned in the solution of the problem—America, England and Japan—are sincerely desirous of solving it, and are prepared to co-operate to that end. In particular, it must be assumed that, given a clear indication of policy, the growing strength of genuine liberalism in Japan will be able to bring sufficient weight of public opinion to bear upon the Jingo element of the Military party to induce it to desist from further encroachments upon China's territory and sovereign rights.  Speaking from personal observation, I am convinced that the intellectual and progressive (Continued on Page 11)

movement in Japan—especially conspicuous in the younger generation—is genuinely in favor of a policy toward China which shall cultivate her friendship and preserve her independence and self-respect, while assisting in the development of her latent resources. But if the forces of conservative and military imperialism should still prove too strong; if Japan, when faced with the necessity of coming to a definite decision, should decline to co-operate in an international scheme for the reorganization of China, there can be no immediate prospect of any peaceful solution of the problem. In that case, matters must continue to drift, and the helpless Chinese people to suffer all the penalties of chaotic misrule until the country's disorders precipitate a new crisis and make it once again a cockpit and center of international strife.

The key to the peaceful solution of the major problems of the Far East is in the hands of the United States, further declares this British observer. As a result of the elimination of Russia as a factor in Oriental affairs, the United States, emerging suddenly as a military power of the first class, has completely changed the aspect of things in the Orient, creating new lines of national antagonism, new economic conflicts. "Humanly speaking," he writes, "the salvation of China and the peace of the Orient depend largely upon a just appreciation of the whole situation by public opinion in the United States: given this, it should be possible to find a solution for all outstanding questions, even such questions as the 'Yellow Peril' and the 'open door.'"

He thinks Japan's over-population problem one of extraordinary seriousness and prophesies that she will not confine her attempts at expansion merely to Korea and Manchuria, but seek further outlets for her rapidly growing population. But he insists that militarism is declining in Japan; Japanese expansion, instead of being colonization of foreign territory backed by Japanese bayonets, will be economic expansion. But that there will be expansion he has no doubt. "When severe economic pressure underlies a virtue nation's belief in its divine mission," says he, "it may be taken for granted, I think, that such a nation's claims to expansion are not likely to be permanently checked, except by superior force."

Three reasons are cited to show why, in his estimation, the more foresighted Japanese leaders are inclined to set their fellow-countrymen on the road of economic expansion rather than on that of aggressive colonization of alien territory: the ill-success of Japanese attempts at colonizing in Korea and Manchuria; the instinctive opposition of Americans to the claims of any Asiatic power to be the overlord of the Asiatic continent; and the rapid growth in China of hostility to the Japanese, a hostility that may seriously endanger Japanese commercial operations in China, Japan's most important commercial market.

Certain clouds may now be described on the horizon of the Far East, Mr. Bland points out, which were not there ten years ago. For instance, relations between foreigners and natives in

LINA CAVALIERI

In

"A Woman of Impulse"

The Peril of being Beautiful!

It wasn't that she didn't love her husband!

Lina Cavallieri plays the part in this great picture of a daughter of Eve whose beauty was far too great for the safety of her own heart or the men she encountered.

It wasn't that she did not love her husband, but simply that she drew other men to her almost unconsciously as the candle-flame does the poor doomed moth. And some of the moths were mighty dangerous.

"A Woman of Impulse" will stir you deeply by its likeness to the problems of Love as you know them.
